STOKER

Who is it?

STOKER unlocks the door from the inside. A WAITER enters, carrying a tray of sandwiches and coffee. He puts it down on a table next to another tray, also laden with shrivelled sandwiches.

WAITER

Shall I take this, sir?

STOKER dips his finger in the cold coffee.

STOKER

Yeah, might as well.

WAITER

Thank you, sir. Would you mind signing, sir.

The WAITER hands STOKER the bill and a pen. He signs it, then hands it back.

WAITER

Would you mind, er

STOKER

Come on then

The WAITER hands him another piece of paper for his autograph.

WAITER

It's to Lynda, ... Lynda with a 'y' -

STOKER scribbles some illegible scrawl.

WAITER

You should see her bedroom walls ...

STOKER hands him back the piece of paper without comment. The phone rings and he goes to answer it.

WAITER

Thank you very much ... she'll be down near the front on the left side ...
